Nail Salon attack suspect Bennie Jackson to face 26 felony charges

■ Judge sends trial forward for man prosecutors say raped, robbed and kidnapped women during four Sacramento-area incidents, including one at a West Capitol Ave. business during daylight hours

The suspect in a string of assaults and robberies at a West Capitol Ave. nail salon and other Sacramento area businesses will face 26 felony charges, a Sacramento Municipal Court justice has determined.

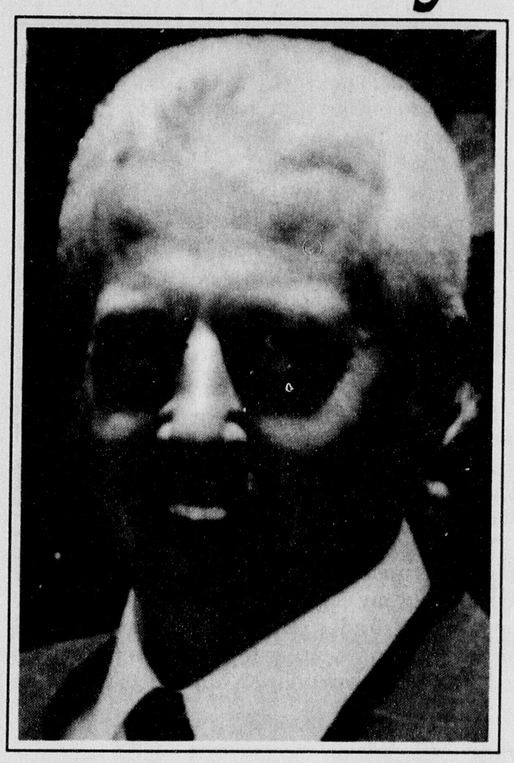

If convicted of all counts, suspect Bennie L. Jackson would not be eligible for parole for 400 years.

In each of the three February nail and hair salon assaults -- including the West Sacramento incident -- an armed suspect entered during business hours, robbed two women inside at the time, forced them to the rear of the business and sexually assaulted several of the victims.

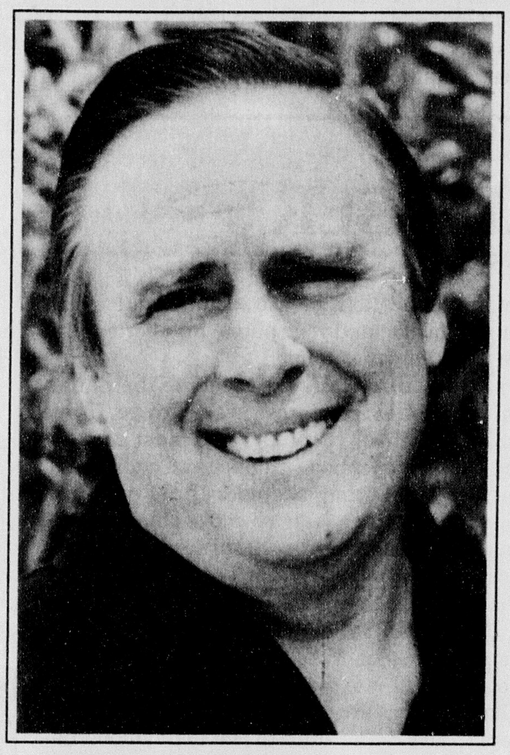

Jackson was arrested May 21 after an Auburn Blvd. incident in which a suspect briefly kidnapped a woman after demanding money. A citizen called police, the victim escaped and Jackson was arrested.

Jackson claims sheriff's deputies arrested the wrong man in the string of crimes.

And they're off

Greg Potnick, incumbent mayor

Bill Kristoff, incumbent vice mayor

Cindy Tuttle, incumbent council member

■ All three incumbents, plus potential challengers Adamo and Montemayor, make moves towards entering the November city council race

The "funny season" has begun, said one candidate for West Sacramento City Council on Monday.

That was the day on which would-be council members were allowed to begin picking up their candidacy documents at city hall, in preparation for the November election in which four of the city's five council seats will be on the ballot.

Merely picking up the papers, of course, doesn't commit the candidates to run. And other candidates will be allowed several more weeks to join the process before cutoff limits set in.

Three of the seats are four-year terms regularly scheduled for election this year, and are held by incumbents Greg Potnick (the current mayor), Bill Kristoff (mayor pro tem) and Cindy Tuttle. All three have picked up their candidacy papers to defend their seats, and both Potnick and Tuttle released statements announcing their candidacies this week as well.

The fourth seat on the ballot will cover the final two years of former council member Roland Hensley's term, and will involve a separate election. Hensley resigned his seat earlier this year due to health troubles.

Besides the incumbents, two newcomers had also "pulled papers" as of Tuesday afternoon. They are:

■ Mark Montemayor, who lists a Stone Blvd. address and has not committed himself to deciding whether to run for the incumbents' four-year seats or for the vacant two-year seat; and

■ Dorothy Adamo, a businesswoman and political activist who picked up candidacy papers for the vacant two-year seat.

The filing period for the council race will end Aug. 9, but will be extended to Aug. 14 if any of the incumbents does not file for re-election.

Anyone wishing for information on how to enter the race may call city hall at 373-5800, or see the information on page two of this newspaper.

Local police will seek volunteers to aid in department's work

■ Local police hope to build a squad of residents to help with support work such as clerical duties, coordinating citizen watch programs, and checking homes while owners are on vacation

By Steve Marschke

A new program modeled after one in Lodi will bring volunteers into support positions at the West Sacramento Police Department.

The "Volunteer In Policing" (or V.I.P.) program, modeled after Lodi's "Partners" program, will recruit local citizens at least 50 years old and attempt to match their skills and interests with needs of the police department.

The volunteers "are a resource that will improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the police department," said Lt. Dave Farmer in a report to the city council.

"Basically, what we're after is people 50 years old and older who are willing to donate a minimum of four hours per week on various assignments," Farmer explained Tuesday. "The role of the volunteers is not to supplant existing personnel, it's to complement them. In our records section, for example, they would file reports so our records people can spend more time on data entry. They will also assist in coordination of neighborhood watch groups, work in the youth diversion program, and maintain files."

Both Farmer and Police Chief Larry Gore stressed that the V.I.P. program will start out small, with about 15 people expected to go through the first training "academy" in September. Early candidates will be selected carefully to meet certain skill needs identified by the department, with more openings expected to be made available later on.

Anyone interested in the V.I.P. program may call Farmer or Community Services Officer Lisa Cox at 372-2461 for information.

Volunteers will not be given direct law enforcement duties.

Some will, however, receive outside-the-office duties such as checking on people's houses while they're on vacation, if the residents so request the police department.

"That's something we can't do right now, because of the volume of calls (for other problems) we get," said Farmer. "If the volunteers find something wrong, though, they will not take action, but will immediately report it. If they spot fresh graffiti or something, they will also report it."

Because the volunteers will be working in a position of trust, they will be required to go through a screening process that includes a background check.

"These people will work around confidential information," said Farmer. "You want somebody who's trustworthy and able to maintain the confidentiality of the information. Not only do they have to undergo a background investigation, but we will do an oral interview to assess their skills, abilities and interests."

Selected volunteers will then undergo training at a special "academy" of instruction.

"They will go through 48 hours of training over a two-week period. They'll go through our V.I.P. academy, where we'll talk about departmental policy and what the jobs are about."

The number of volunteers will be strictly limited to about 15 at first, chosen to meet certain skill areas.

"If we get a large number of applicants," said Farmer, "we don't want people to get discouraged if they're not part of the first 15. There will be more openings later."

West Sac Council votes down appeal on billiards room

■ City council's denial was the last step -- short of a lawsuit -- in the failed effort to bring a new billiards center to West Sacramento

By Steve Marschke

By a 4-to-nothing vote, the West Sacramento City Council upheld a planning commission decision and denied permission for Jose Ramon Sandoval to bring his proposed Family Billiards Center to the Riverbend Shopping Center.

The billiards hall just couldn't overcome objections from the police department, planning department and numerous citizens that it would attract loitering and crime to the already depressed commercial site.

"The location is not appropriate for a pool hall," city planning staff member Steve Rikala told the council before the vote. "Residents currently using the Riverbend Shopping Center are currently being harassed by transients and by panhandlers. Staff believes that given the nature of the activity, the hours of operation (open until 2 a.m.) and the lack of a full service snack bar, the establishment is not family oriented."

Sandoval had maintained that security at the facility, in a set of rooms formerly housing the Yolo County Municipal Courts, would be tight. In fact, he pointed out, it would be just across the hall from the mall's security office.

But Rikala said that the private security firm "only has a contract to provide security to the shopping center as a whole, and not specifically to the billiards center. It is also our understanding that the security service will move out as early as August."

Sandoval addressed the council, asking for a chance to prove he would run a clean and secure operation. He said crime and drug problems surrounding a previous billiards hall he had managed on the east end of West Capitol Ave. were linked to the poor environment at that location, and were not directly connected with the pool hall.

"I owned the business for over six years," he said. "I inherited the problems that existed when I took over. How can I prove myself (at the new location) if I'm not allowed to open?"

Citizen Louisa Vessell also addressed the council, as one of a number of people speaking in opposition to the project.

"Do we need another pool hall that serves alcohol, that is open to 2 a.m., that is located near a residential area?," she asked. "Will this pool hall help us achieve our vision of a 'premier' city? I think not."

One opponent to the project asked people in the audience who were opposed to the pool hall to stand up. Roughly forty people stood.

Following the discussion, city council members Greg Potnick (the mayor), Bill Kristoff (the mayor pro tem), Cindy Tuttle and Wes Beers joined to vote down the project after a brief discussion.

The vote upheld an earlier West Sacramento Planning Commission denial of the billiards center -- a decision which Sandoval had appealed to the council.

Trade zone files bankruptcy

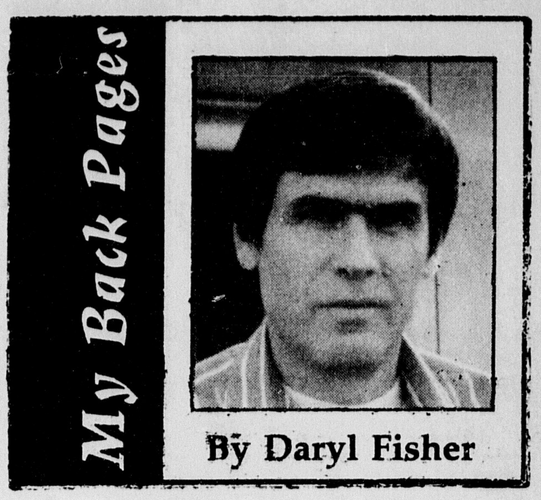

A company that had been licensed by the Port of Sacramento to operate a "free trade zone" warehouse area in West Sacramento has sought bankruptcy protection.

According to the Sacramento Bee, the California Free Trade Zone is nearly 11 months behind in its payments to the port, adding up to about $163,000 in lease payments and license payments.

The company is owned

Be careful what you want -- you just might get it

I took a deep breath, reluctantly returned Harry's lecherous half-smile and helped him push open the heavy glass door of the base massage parlor. Once inside, Harry whirled around and conveniently used the door as a mirror and examined his lean and handsome profile in great detail. Finally satisfied with his appearance, he nodded for me to follow him up to the front desk where we were warmly greeted by a smiling, middle-aged Vietnamese man wearing a multi-colored Hawaiian sports shirt, shiny black slacks and an ancient pair of Ho Chi Minh sandals. He issued us each a numbered card and politely motioned for us to take a seat in the waiting room.

"I thought you said the Army ran this place," I whispered to Harry as we made our way over to the deserted waiting area and sat down.

"It does, Daryl," he assured me. "The Vietnamese only work here. It's good old Uncle Sam himself who makes sure everything's on the up and up. They inspect the joint all the time, keep prices reasonable, pass out birth control pills, you name it, man. They even have medics come over and check out the girls every week so none of us war heroes go home with elephantitis."

"Elephantitis?" I asked him. "What in the world is elephantitis?"

"You don't want to know," he assured me. "But if you get it, rumor has it that they put you on the good ship Hope and you never get to go home. You just float around and around the world until you die."

The tiny man at the desk put aside his Vietnamese newspaper long enough to call out Harry's number. "Hey," I blurted out, grabbing Harry's arm as he attempted to stand up, "I don't even know much this is going to cost."

"Would you relax, Daryl. The bath is only ten piasters, but everything else is extra -- a lot extra. Just make sure you leave here with at least 25 piasters. You'll need that to get into the poker game tonight." I nodded that I understood, although it was the first time I had heard anything about a poker game.

After Harry had hurried off, I hastily fumbled through my wallet to check on my financial situation. I had colorful military script, not Vietnamese piasters. If they were equal in value, and I had no idea if they were or weren't, then I had exactly 41 piasters on me.

As I was wondering what kind of extra I might be offered for approximately six piasters, my number was suddenly called out. I bravely stood up and walked nervously over to the front desk. I handed the little man ten piasters and waited patiently while he carefully counted it.

"Take room number 12," he finally said. "Down hall, on left."

Still not certain what I was getting myself into, I walked slowly down the hall until I came to door number 12. I paused for a moment, took a deep breath and knocked gently on the door. Getting no response, I cautiously let myself in, poking my head around the corner first.

Absolutely everything in the room was white; the color of the walls, the four foot high box-like steam bath, the rubdown table, and even all the washcloths and towels which were neatly stacked in a doorless cabinet below a large handwritten sign which read, Maximum Length Of Bath One Hour."

There were no chairs in the room, so I hopped up on the rubdown table and sat down, dangling and kicking my legs nervously. I was eager to bury myself under the inviting shower and I quickly gave up waiting for someone to come in and give me instructions on how to use the steam bath. I undressed, turned on the shower as hot and heavy as I could stand it and covered my head with a blob of shampoo.

I was vigorously scrubbing away when a very sweet female voice suddenly called out, "I be right there."

In my panic and haste to identify the speaker, I foolishly opened my eyes and filled them with stinging soap. There was no shower curtain to hide behind and I blindly waved around for the towel I had hung on a nearby hook. Unable to locate it, I frantically attempted to rub the painful shampoo from my eyes. Then, with absolutely no warning, two very warm and soft hands started to lather up my back.

"I get you clean," said the cheerful voice, "then I put you in steam bath."

"It's alright," I pleaded. "I can do it, really."

"It my job," she replied indignantly. "I like do it." She very thoroughly lathered up everything in sight and said, "See, I do number one job."

"Thank you," I mumbled, the shampoo now in my mouth.

Before my bloodshot eyes had cleared enough to get a really good look at her, she had me rinsed off and squeaky clean. Then she took me by the hand and led me to a wooden stool in the steam bath. She was the tallest Vietnamese girl I had seen, with a long, pretty face and a smile that appeared to be a permanent fixture.

"I be right back, ten minute," she informed me while snugly wrapping a couple of towels around my neck to prevent any of the uncomfortably hot steam I was cooking in from leaking out of the circular escape hatch. "I come back and give you number one rub!"

After she had scampered out the door, and as I sat there trapped in the steam bath, I asked myself what in the world I was doing there. I envisioned a Vietcong sympathizer rushing into the room with a loaded rifle and blowing me away. And worst of all, I could just see the headlines back in the News-Ledger; Private Daryl Fisher -- Killed In His First Month In Vietnam While Soliciting Sex.

The final points tally was 412 for the Dolphins and 357 for the Beavers.

The Dolphins were led by last year's female Swimmer of the Year, Jamie McCall (5 wins, 13-14 girls) and Tony Barbosa (5 wins, 13-14 boys). Other swimmers who turned in great efforts were Cheryl Alander (4 wins, 15-18 girls); Stacey Paige (4 wins, 9-10 girls); Micaela Barbosa (4 wins, 9-10 girls); Bridgette Tacdol (3 wins, 9-10 girls); Holly Valine (4 wins, 11-12 girls); and Brittany Linder (3 wins, 6 and under girls).

In another exceptional team effort, the Dolpins swam their hearts out in front of a very enthusiastic packed house that witnessed great racing and sportsmanship between the two

The NBA's free agent market went crazy this week, signing players to multi-year contracts for millions of dollars. $$$

Denver's center, Kikembe Mutombo, is a good example of a player being overpaid. The Atlanta Hawks will play Mutombo $50 million for five years. That's $10 million per year for a player who averages 12 points, 12 rebounds and only three block shots per game.

The Lakers reportedly offered Shaquille O'Neil $95 million over seven years, but he wants more! Orlando offered "Shaq" $112 million over seven years. This is the start of the same greed that's killing Major League Baseball.

Speaking of baseball, the Giants won two games last week. Yes, they beat the Dodgers twice, splitting their four-game series. The two teams meet again on Thursday in S.F., and will play the last four games at 3 Com Park, ending Sunday, July 21. Last chance to see the Dodgers in San Francisco.

Tickets for the World Boxing Organization welterweight title fight Friday night, Aug. 16, at the Convention Center, will go on sale Wednesday at the Sacramento Box Office.

Jose "Maestrito" Lopez (36-3-1, 28 KOs) of Durango, Mexico, will be defending his 147-pound title against "Yori Boy" Campas (64-1, 56 KOs) in a 12-round bout. The undercard will include a 12-round NABO featherweight title bout between Rodrigo Cerda (15-1-1, 10 KOs) of Houston and Jose Luis Noyola (19-0-1, 14 KOs) of Mexico. Local undefeated featherweight Willie Jorrin (15-0, 10 KOs) will be on the card in a ten-round bout.

Ticket prices at the 5,000 seat arena are $22, $32, $42 and ringside at $62.

See ya next week!!

Attention Marshall grads:

Reunion & golf

The second annual James Marshall High School Reunion Golf Tournament will be held on Saturday, August 24, at the Davis Municipal Golf Course. The 18-hole scramble will begin at 12 p.m. The cost of $45 includes green fees, cart, prizes and more. Alumni can also choose to register by becoming a "Mighty Wildcat" business sponsor for only $100.

Something new this year is the class competition. The JMHS graduating class with the most paid golfers will receive a $100 donation toward their reunion fund. So far, the Class of '73 is leading the competition in paid registrations. Classes must have a minimum of 12 paid golfers to be eligible for the contest. Only one prize will be awarded for his contest.

All participants are welcome to enter individually or as foursomes. Although this tourney is just for fun and beginners are encouraged to participate, there will be several contests for golfers to display their skills. Prizes -- in both men's and women's categories -- will be awarded for closest to the pin, most accurate drive, and longest drive. Golfers will also have the opportunity to participate in a putting contest before their round of golf.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

We need to avoid importing low-income people

A non-profit development company formed to help West Sacramento meet the low income housing quotas brought about by new development in places like Lighthouse Marina has opened its third local housing project.

This one, Washington Courtyards, is located in the Broderick (northeastern) area of the city, and joins sister projects on West Capitol Ave. and in the Maple/Holly street area.

For financial reasons, the housing corporation needs to fill the new apartments fast. But advertising locally and mailing invitations to people renting elsewhere in the city, have failed to bring in enough applicants to fill the units.

So, as was reported here several weeks ago, the West Sacramento Housing Development Corporation (WSHDC) mailed 13,000 invitations to renters in Sacramento, inviting them to apply for low income apartments at the Broderick project.

There has been public concern over this, and the city council has asked city staff to look into the situation.

The problem is that the housing corporation, working to help the city with its legal requirements to build low income housing, finds itself working against the city's best interests when it tries to import low income renters from other areas.

WSHDC and the city need to find a way to make sure every possible room in the new housing projects are filled by low income people already living in West Sacramento. This strategy may take longer, and may cause a financial hardship to the WSHDC, but must be pursued.

When critics of the young city's plans several years ago asked if West Sacramento's designs for grandiose new developments, such as Lighthouse, would squeeze out the city's less affluent residents, the answer from one councilman was that the city was on its way up, but planned to take all its residents along for the upwards ride.

That's one reason why we need to make sure we work hard to give current residents first choice on where to live, even if it slows down the process of filling the new low income apartments.

The other is that we're a community out of balance. Any local postal employee will tell you that more government assistance checks flow into West Sacramento than anywhere else in the county. We already have more than our share of low income residents, and for the health of the entire community, we need to work hard to build the middle and above-middle income segments of the population. Bringing in more lower income people from other areas is a step backwards in improving the local tax base and retail climate.

This is not a statement of bigotry against the low income -- many of whom are hard working, upstanding people. It's just a statement on the economic truths of West Sacramento's economy.

It's unclear whether WSHDC has to advertise for tenants from Sacramento because West Sacramento has saturated its housing market with places for low income people to live. But if that is the case, then we must pursue other alternatives to building new units, and then having to fill them with people from elsewhere.

If we can prove that our market for new low income housing units is filled, and if we can find a legal way to re-direct some of the money we have earmarked for construction of more units to be used instead for rehabilitating some of the existing low income housing stock in private hands, we should do so.

This solution would benefit not only current low income residents of West Sacramento, but the private landlords who house them, and the city's economic health as well.

Local low-income tenants were asked first, says housing corp.

This letter is being written in response to the recent newspaper article (News-Ledger, July 3) article regarding West Sacramento Housing Development Corporation's (WSHDC) efforts to recruit prospective renters in Sacramento for the Washington Courtyard apartment complex in Broderick.

Washington Courtyard will have its first residents move in at the end of this month. This development was financed with a variety of financing including that from Bank of America Community Development Bank, American Savings Bank and Federal Low Income Housing Tax Credits. It was developed in response to legal obligations under California Redevelopment Law requiring Lighthouse Marina to provide 15 percent of the units they develop as affordable housing. WSHDC was selected to own and operate the complex because of its commitment to providing quality housing in the City.

The recruitment efforts in Sacramento were made only after marketing efforts to reach West Sacramento renters were fully exhausted. These efforts were made in accordance with the management plan approved by the City of West Sacramento City Council. This plan required targeting marketing efforts to the local population, selecting quality residents and adhering to strict maintenance standards. These recruitment efforts included weekly advertising in the two local newspapers for three months and two separate mailings to 2,690 apartment residents. In addition, flyers were sent to 152 businesses, to the Yolo County Services Center, to the Employment Development Department office, to the Washington Unified School District, to bulletin boards at the

Apology

A few weeks ago I wrote an article about the barge canal, and as part of the article, I made a reference to the new Daniel C. Palamidessi bridge. However, for the sake of emphasis, I did not use the correct bridge's name. At that time I was unaware of the history surrounding Daniel Palamidessi. Had I known what positive impact he and his family have had in this community, I would have referred to the bridge as the Palamidessi bridge. My reference was totally inappropriate, and I would like to offer my humble and sincere apologies to the Palamidessi family for any discomfort this article may have caused.

Low income dispute

I thought the latest "low and very low income housing units" built between E and F and between 7th and 8th Streets, 90 of them, were to fill the needs of West Sacramentans, having been financed in whole or large part by our city taxpayers. It is therefore very distrubing to learn that the "non-profit" West Sacramento Housing Development Corporation/WSHDC claim they must advertise across the river to draw (more) low-income folks from Sacramento. When WSHDC staff claim they "have made every effort to contact West Sacramentans interested in renting," one wonders whether they contacted the Yolo County Housing Authority, County Social Services or the Christian Center nearby at 6th and Andrew Streets? Did WSHDC advertise in either of the city's weekly papers? The YCHA always seems to have a large backlog of applicants who need subsidized housing and the Christian Center has units for "interim housing" until more permanent housing that's affordable for low-income folks is available. And while Yolo County Social Services may not directly provide low-income housing, I would bet they could advise WSHDC as to whom or where eligible tenants could be found -- here in West Sac!

Since WSHDC is "non-profit," no property taxes are paid, they pay less for utilities and we know such groups pay far lower taxes, if any, on income.

Had City Council and Planning Commission known that over 90 percent of those 90 units were to be marketed in Sacramento, it is unlikely they would have approved the project. West Sac already has a bigger percentages of low-very/low income residents than does the Capital City; hence, no need to increase that imbalance.

At least twice in the past I recall reading in the Bee that paper's justification for Sacramento busing low-income folks over here (and paying their first month's rent at one or more motels -- where rent is quite high) -- in obvious hopes that these financial problem people would stay in West Sac, becoming our financial burdens. So we "get enough of that without even trying."

Next thing we know, over half of these units will be filled from Sacramento and suddenly/somehow, we'll need more such units for our low-incomers. Neat, huh?

two major grocery stores, to four laundromats and to the library.

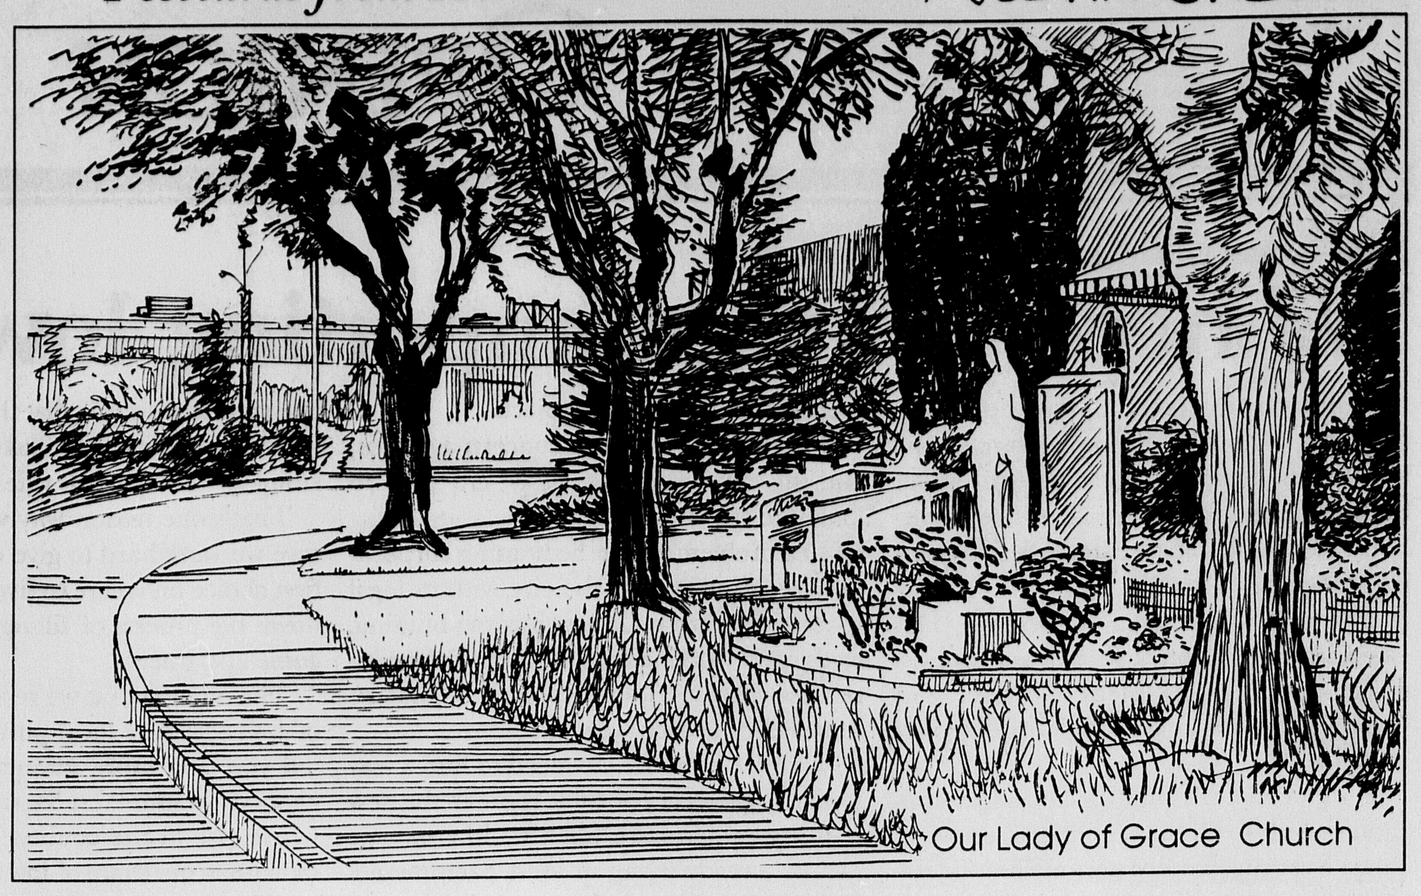

The timing of rent-up was crucial because of the project's budget constraints and the need to quickly generate rental revenue to meet debt obligations. The recruitment efforts beyond the City were necessary to attract qualified applicants in addition to those generated from the recruitment efforts in the City. The thorough screening of these applicants will help assure that the residents at Washington Courtyard will be good neighbors who will help create the good quality neighborhoods promised by the City Council. Through a strong property management program Washington Courtyard will achieve the strict maintenance standards which are currently being successfully achieved at WSHDC's existing West Capitol Courtyard community. These maintenance standards and tenant screening procedures are required by the regulatory agreements entered into with the City for each complex.

WSHDC is aware that other landlords face these same challenges of attracting good residents and to that end we are in the process of helping to establish an organization of West Sacramento landlords and property managers who can work together to improve rental housing conditions in the City. It is our intention to share the names on our waiting list with the members of this organization and therefore help provide them with a good source of qualified applicants. This will help WSHDC meet our promise of not only providing good quality housing but helping to insure the existence of good quality residents.

WSHDC is pleased to be able to provide the quality housing offered at Washington Courtyard and is confident that its residents will be good neighbors who will be an asset to the Broderick neighborhood.

Commission has now recognized that East Yolo is a part of Yolo County and will now begin to send agendas and staff reports and EIR's to the Turner Library. We have perhaps been too busy with all the many changes being made in West Sacramento and planning for the city to attend to this important body. It is true that it serves the unincorporated area but it does have members from Davis and Woodland and all governmental units that have spheres of influence have status before the body on matters that affect the units.

Now, it is important that the Board of Supervisors also recognize that matters such as the Cache Creek Off-Channel gravel mining plan which will be on its agenda for Tuesday, July 23, is of concern to all of Yolo County, including East Yolo. Permits which will allow exploitation of the gravel along 14.5 miles of Cache Creek with permits of up from 30-50 years.

Funds from tonnage extracted will be used to restore the in-channel gravel mining damage already occurred and doe some rural residents dependent on county services the taxes are seen as life-saving. The companies are opposed to depth limits in the mining.

Over 7,000 residents, who believe that the County should put first priority on the preservation of the County's farm base, protection of the aquifer (gravel which protects West Yolo's water supply) and other natural resources as the foundations for the urban and rural Yolo County economic development, have signed a petition to regulate the mining. This should appear on the November ballot.

Will the board try to beat the public vote by the fast tracking of all decisions and issuing of permits in October without waiting for November?

Pac Bell says Caller ID service is ready to go

From Pacific Bell

Caller ID -- one of the most popular phone services in the nation -- is now available in West Sacramento from Pacific Bell.

Caller ID lets people see the telephone number of the person calling as the phone is ringing. Consumers need to subscribe to Caller ID service and purchase either a telephone with a built-in display device or a display device that connects to an existing phone.

Caller ID is $6.50 per month for residential customers and $7.50 a month for business customers. There is a one-time installation fee of $5 for residential customers and $6 for businesses, which is waived if customers order the service through the company's Quickservice automatic ordering system at 1-800-795-6000. Pacific Bell Caller ID equipment ranges in price from under $30 for a basic display attachment to cordless models and display phones with two lines that run up to $270.

"Caller ID is a privacy tool that balances the rights of people making calls as well as people receiving calls," said Mark Pitchford, Pacific Bell vice president of consumer marketing. "It gives Californians more control over the calls they receive. That's a balance of power that has historically favored the caller -- until now."

Caller ID has been available in some parts of the United States for as long as ten years. The service has been popular among:

Parents who teach children to answer only those calls from telephone numbers they recognize;

People who want to recognize long-distance telephone numbers so that they don't have to return -- and pay for -- long-distance calls;

Families that want to recognize telephone numbers of elderly parents and children living away from home;

Home-based business owners who want to differentiate customer calls from personal calls; and

Businesses that want to match a telephone number to a caller's account number for faster customer service.

To order Caller ID service and equipment, customers can call Pacific Bell at 1-800-983-9050. Pacific Bell is a subsidiary of Pacific Telesis Group, a San Francisco-based diversified communications corporation.

New bike!

Four-year old Ricky Ray of West Sacramento is the most recent winner of a BMX bicycle in the monthly contest sponsored by Denny's Restaurant in West Sacramento.

Ricky, a local native, said he likes to eat at Denny's "because they have good Key Lime pie."

The bicycles are donated by Tilley's Bicycle Store on West Capitol Ave. For details on how to enter the contest, call or drop by Denny's near Enterprise Blvd. No purchase is necessary. Entering children must be accompanied by an adult.

American Legion baseball, anyone?

American Legion Baseball may return to West Sacramento -- but only if enough residents step forward to help manage it.

Residents Johnny Lopes and Steve Ericson say they would like to bring the league back to town, to give the city's best players a chance to play, and to be scouted for college and perhaps the pros.

But Lopes and Ericson are seeking to find out if there are any like-minded souls out there willing to help administrate the league.

They have scheduled a meeting for July 27 at 11 a.m. at 2245 Davis Road for all interested people.

American Legion Baseball was in West Sacramento from 1965 to 1994, they said, and developed pro draftees including Steve Sax, Dave Sax, Dave More, Bo Dotson, Robert Dod, Willey Smith, Steve Lee, Josh Kurtlin, Karey Newton, and many college players as well.

Ericson may be reached at 372-0577. Lopes may be reached at 371-5911.

"GRAND" OPENING?!

In keeping with the policy of Truth in Advertising, I can't honestly make that claim. There will be no hot dogs, balloons or fanfare. In fact, it will probably take me months to get this thing up and running. Why? Because I'm one-man operation. Please be patient. If you need a sign right away, I suggest you search the Yellow Pages for some company that offers One Day Service. But if you're willing to give me a week or two to design and produce your custom signage, you'll get the highest quality product at a very reasonable price.

Metal wire theft almost an epidemic

From the City of West Sacramento

Both the city and private business sectors have been suffering an alarming increase in the theft of copper wire and aluminum components. Over the past few months, wire has been taken from out of city parts and along city streets. Private buildings have been stripped of their internal wiring and even an aluminum railing along the boat dock was cut-off and removed.

These thefts are costing thousands of dollars in replacement costs. The police department is actively attempting to locate and arrest the persons responsible for the thefts, but the random places and times of the thefts make apprehension difficult. We are asking citizens who witness these acts to immediately call our dispatch number at 375-6474. If a citizen is able to get a license number, or vehicle/suspect description, that would be appreciated. We do not suggest that any citizen attempt to confront a potential thief. These persons may be wearing shirts similar to those worn by our city employees, so don't take anything for granted. The police department will respond to any information citizens are able to provide. If you have information, and wish to remain anonymous, please call our Crime Tip Hot Line at 552-2047.

Rebates

An estimated 160,000 elderly and disabled California homeowners and renters are eligible for rebates through the annual Homeowners or Renters Association Program. To qualify, claimants must be at least 62 years old, be blind or totally disabled as of December 31, 1995, and have $13,200 or less in total household income in 1995. Homeowners can receive from 4 to 96 percent of the property tax they paid on the first $34,000 assessed value of their home. Renters can receive assistance ranging from $10 to $240. Claimants who have filed in the past two years are advised to wait until they receive their labeled forms before filing. Form mailings begin in mid-May. Rebates will not be mailed until after the 1996/97 state budget is passed. Call the West Sacramento Senior Center at 373-5819 to schedule an appointment for form completion. TRADE ZONE from p. 1 principally by Sacramento developer Ted Connolly, said the Bee.

Opened in 1989, the facility sold $4.6 million in tax-exempt bonds to pay for warehouse construction at its Industrial Blvd. site. Tokai Bank guaranteed payments on the bonds.

The company had little success using the trade zone for its intended purpose of providing duty-deferred storage space for international goods, and derived income mostly from simple warehousing.
